OUR HISTORY

The roots of the International Union of History and Philosophy of Science and Technology go back to 1928, when a small group of historians of science, led by the Italian Aldo Mieli and the Belgian-American George Sarton, founded the International Academy of History of Science.

Over the years, the Academy evolved from a society of individual members into an organization largely made up of national committees. In 1947, the group reorganized as the International Union of History of Science and joined the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU), the world's leading non-governmental organization in the field of science and an affiliate of UNESCO.

In 1956, at the urging of ICSU, the historians of science merged with the International Union of Philosophy of Science to form the International Union of History and Philosophy of Science (IUHPS), which comprises two distinct units: the Division of History of Science and Technology (DHST) and the Division of Logic, Methodology, and Philosophy of Science (DLMPS). In 1971 the DHST amicably separated from the Academy, which became an association of distinguished scholars. Since 2015, the Union has been called the International Union for History and Philosophy of Science and Technology (IUPHST).

Composed of about 45 national committees and over twenty commissions and sections, the DHST leads the world in promoting the history of science and technology. It will hold its 26th international congress in Prague, Czech Republic, in July 2021.

2019 DHST PRIZE FOR YOUNG SCHOLARS SCHEME

The International Union of the History and Philosophy of Science and Technology, Division of History of Science and Technology (IUHPST/DHST) invites submissions for the DHST Prize for Young Scholars, to be presented in 2021. Initiated at the 22nd International Congress of History of Science, held in Beijing in 2005, the DHST Young Scholar Prize is now awarded by the IUHPST/DHST every two years. Up to three awards for recent Ph.D. historians of science and technology will be awarded to recognize outstanding doctoral dissertations completed and filed between September 1, 2016 and September 1, 2018.

The 2019 DHST Prize does not specify distinct categories, but submissions must be on the history of science or technology in any part of the world. The Award Committee endeavors to maintain the broadest coverage of subjects, geographical areas, chronology and civilizations (African, American, Asian, Islamic, Western and Ancient Civilisations, and others not included in the above list).

Each Prize consists of a certificate, assistance with travel and accommodation expenditures to the IUHPST/DHST Congress in Prague in July 2021 and a waiver of registration fees. The winner of a prize whose dissertation substantially engages Islamic science and culture (over competitions five [2016–2018] and six [2018–2020]), is also awarded the Ihsanoglu Prize given by the ISAR Foundation.

Award Committee

The Committee is comprised of the DHST Council members and distinguished subject specialists.
